Of two evils chose the one you have worried through before.

Even people who can't hold their tongues know when other people ought to.

When the doctor tells a woman to diet she eats less at the table and more in the pantry.

The woman who has her first spectacles always believes she wears them just to rest her eyes.

A man never knows what he can do until he tries, and then he wishes he had done something else.

There are two public nuisances—the people who never carry umbrellas and the people who carry them all the time.

When a woman wishes to do something real out and out reckless and extravagant she dreams of going to Europe.

KAPEA FELL BY GAMBLING

The Whole Story will Come Out at His Trial.

It is said that Henry Kapea, the embezzler who was recently brought back from England on extradition papers, and who was more than willing to come, has changed his mind about pleading guilty, and will make a fight for his liberty. And, by the same token, there are apt to be developments. For it is now known to the authorities that, although Kapea got away with the money he was charged with having embezzled, he took little of it away from Honolulu with him.

Kapea, it appears, owes his downfall to a passion for gambling, and to his own inability to stand the taunts of older men who told him that he was not possessed of sand when he refused to play with them—and with the cash of his employers. The very men that he played with are known, and some of them were uniforms that should have been among the last seen in gambling joints. But those were wide-open days, and many things were done in Honolulu that it is not deemed so safe to do, now.

Anyway, Kapea fell. His defalcation was discovered on a Friday. On the following morning, although he had promised to be on hand and take his medicine, he had vanished, and the police authorities could get no track of him. They said themselves that they could not. It is true that a note was found in his room, so written as to lead to the conclusion that he had committed suicide, and the conclusion was accepted by the police. Kapea, of course, was pretty well known in town, notwithstanding which fact he went on board a steamer bound for Japan, leaving port on the Monday following the discovery of his crime, and sailed away to foreign lands with the little he had succeeded in keeping out of the clutches of the men who had wrought his ruin.

All this story, it is said, will be brought out at the coming trial—and, if it is, there will be some pretty interesting reading as to names and dates and places.

STEVENSON'S POEM ON PRINCESS KAUULANI

HONOLULU, H. T.,
June 4th, 1905.

Editor Advertiser: In today's edition the statement by Frederick J. Haskins, in his article "The Life of American Women in Hawaii Nel," that Stevenson's lines to the late Princess Kauulani had, he had been informed by Mr. A. S. Cleghorn, never before appeared in print, is erroneous. It has been printed numerous times in various articles on Hawaii, but I am unable at this time to specify the papers. However, it may be found in "Ballads and Other Poems of Robert Louis Stevenson," Volume 16, Page 235, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, 1901.

EDWARD W. CAMPBELL.

MISS CUNHA BECOMES THE BRIDE OF DR. H. V. MURRAY

MRS. H. V. MURRAY (nee Cunha).

Last night at the Moana Hotel cottage of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Cunha, Dr. Harvey V. Murray claimed pretty Rosalie Cunha for his bride. The beautiful residence, formerly occupied by the United States Minister to Hawaii during the days of the Republic, was filled with relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom long before the coming of the bride—that thrilling moment when every head is turned downward, and the whisper, heard so frequently in churches, "Here she comes," and which sends every feminine heart athrob. When Father Stephen of the Catholic Mission entered the reception hall of the cottage, Miss Cunha and Dr. Murray awaited him in the alcove. The alcove was framed with small white daisies and clusters of beautiful, fragrant and drooping Easter lilies, protruding their immaculate beauty through masses of greenery, of which the asparagus plumosa was most prominent. An electric globe above was shaded with delicately-colored paper. In the opposite corner was a huge and beautiful bank of white marguerites the blossoms peeping out from a dense mass of greenery. Bamboo stalks and palms completed the garnishments of the room.

Father Stephen took his station in the alcove, facing the little throng of spectators, the bride and groom standing directly before him. Princess Kawanakoa, the matron of honor stood at the left of the bride, and Mr. C. Cunha, brother of the bride, served the groom as best man. The bride was given away in marriage by her father, Mr. E. S. Cunha, who stood at one side with Mrs. Cunha. The solemn ritual of the Catholic church united the couple in marriage, following which the priest gave a sermon of advice to the couple, showing them the path of duty in their married life and admonishing them to tread the path of religious duty.

At the conclusion of the religious service the happy couple received the congratulations of those present, chief among whom were the ushers—Justice Arthur G. Wilder, Dr. Yost, U. S. A., Mr. J. Tarn McGrew, Mr. J. O. Carter, Jr., and Mr. A. Berg.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the Hawaiian Government band, sent as a compliment by Governor Carter, and stationed in the Moana Hotel park, played the wedding march, following it with other appropriate selections.

It was a beautiful wedding throughout. The cottage was ablaze with lights, the park was illuminated in honor of the occasion, with myriads of parti-colored lights peeping out from the foliage, and in every room beautiful floral decorations gave a festive look to everything. The dining room was garnished with festoons of Golden Shower blossoms, each festoon merging to a common center, the remainder of the room being relieved by palms and other green plants. The billiard room was filled with green plants, relieved with bowls of beautiful roses. The hallway was filled with the trailing parasite vine.

Her robe of cream Duchess satin shimmered beneath the drapery of embroidered chiffon, and the veil of white silk point d'esprit enveloped her like a morning mist. White carnation blossoms further beautified the effect. The skirt was made full with a demi-train, and with insertions of lace medallions and pleated flounces produced a pretty effect. The waist was simple in effect, the white satin showing beneath Honiton lace which also draped the shoulders. The short sleeves permitted long gloves, reaching to the elbows, to be worn. A handsome necklace of sapphires completed the costume.

Princess Kawanakoa, as matron of honor, wore a smart gown of white chiffon over pink satin with black lace insertions, a Battenberg lace coat completing her robe.

Mrs. Cunha wore a beautiful gown of black silk.

A rare display of presents was exhibited upstairs. The room was filled with cut-glass ware, solid silver pieces, glass ware, kahilis and beautiful objects d'art.

The wedding ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock and the reception began at 9 o'clock, at which time the bridal couple received their numerous friends in the alcove of lilies and daisies. At 11 o'clock the guests repaired to the Moana Hotel dining room where a sumptuous supper was served at tables prettily decorated with flowers. Salads, cakes, ice cream and punch were served, during the discussion of which music was heard emanating from the music gallery, rendered by the Ellis Quintette club.

The Celebrated Nerve Vitalizer and Tonic Quickly Transformed This Run Down Woman—She "Can't Say Too Much" for

PAINE'S CERYL COMPOUND
IT GIVES ALMOST INSTANT EFFECT.

DENVER, COLO.—"After a long season with the 'Silver Slipper' Company, I went to Galesburg to visit my brother and rest up for the coming season. A professional who is compelled to go through a hard season without any rest is totally run down before the season is over. This was my case exactly. My nerves were all unstrung and I was very much in need of a good nerve tonic. A friend suggested that I give Paine's Ceryl Compound a trial, and I did. The improvement was wonderful. When I received my call for rehearsal I left for New York feeling like another person. I cannot say too much for Paine's Ceryl Compound. It did me a world of good."—Miss Winnifred Gerard.

"Braced—Invigorated—Cured"—this is the tone of thousands of letters sent in by men and women of every calling and every station in life; grateful for the almost instant strength and health they get from Paine's Ceryl Compound. It feeds nature's own nerve-food—Ceryl—direct to the starving nerve centers.

The snakes which recently arrived for the Zoo won't be allowed to do any amusing in this neck o' the woods, for the Custom House officials have put their feet down (not on the poor snakes) and at present it is the consignee who cusses. (The above is a joke.) There are no snakes in

PRIMO LAGER

The Government ENTOMOLOGIST satisfied himself on this point before the Brewery was permitted to open for business.

ating from the music gallery, rendered by the Ellis Quintette club.

In a rear room of the Cunha cottage refreshments were served to the gentlemen, the place being a popular rendezvous, and where the groom was honored on many occasions.

Cablegrams were received from many sources. Among them was one dated Washington, D. C., and signed merely "Jack," containing the following terse message: "Kakaako congratulates." An interpretation of the message from the Secretary of the Territory is to the effect that the "Kakaako Club" is one which numbers in its membership Secretary "Jack" Atkinson and the bride and groom. Another was from Dr. Daniel Murray of Halifax, a near relative of the groom, while still another was from Clifford Egan from Little Rock, Ark., offering congratulations to both bride and groom. Not so long ago eastern papers told of a romance in which Miss Cunha, described as a "Hawaiian Princess," and Mr. Egan figured. Thus the congratulatory message.

The wedding reception was attended by several hundred guests, numbering among them the most exclusive members of Honolulu society, with whom the bride and groom have long been favorites.

The festivities concluded with a ball in the reception parlor of the Moana, where enjoyment reigned until a late hour this morning and in which the bride and groom joined.

BITS OF KOREAN WISDOM.

Proverbs in General Use Among the People of "the Land of Morning Calm."

The Cosmopolitan is indebted to a citizen of Korea, says that journal, for a number of proverbs and sayings which afford an interesting insight into Korean modes of thought, and in this way illustrate the intellectual attitude and power of observation of the people:

"A thing is good when it is new, a man is good when he is old."

"He who hath eaten salt drinketh water."

"One can paint the fur of the tiger, but not his joints."

"One knows the face of a man, but not his interior."

"If one is not observing, one sees nothing."

"Even the blind man can find his way through an open door."

"When the tiger is gone, the fox is master."

"As soon as the moon is full it begins to grow smaller."

"The higher the mountain, the deeper the valley."

"Does smoke come out of a fireless chimney?"

"Even a hedgehog says his young ones are weak."

"A single high wheat stalk is not distinguished from the rest in the field."

"It is only the thirsty who dig a well."

"When the ox has broken through the stall repairs are first made."

"A family who has no sickness for ten years must be rich."
